

To-Day Two of Richmond's Strongest Banks Consolidate Under the Name of National State and City Bank

Effective this morning, the National State Bank, of Richmond, and the City Bank of Richmond are united under the name of National State and City Bank.

This consolidation will give Greater Richmond a greater, stronger bank.

The National State and City Bank will have a capital of $1,000,000.00 and a surplus of about $600,000.00.

It will not be a new bank in the commonly accepted term of the word, but simply the merging of two banks old in service, strong in resources, and with large and desirable clienteles in order that the greater bank might serve better the interest of all.

A major number of the officers of both the National State and the City Bank will be active in the new bank, where they will greet old and new patrons.

A Bank for Banks, Individuals, Firms and Corporations

The enlarged institution heartily solicits the accounts of Banks, Individuals, Mercantile Firms, Corporations, etc.

In return it offers safety, ability to serve, courteous treatment, promptness and fairness.

No account is too small, and small deposits will have every attention.

Depositors Will Be Extended Every Courtesy

Realizing fully that a bank's duty is to safeguard and to serve, the National State and City Bank will extend to all depositors every help and courtesy consistent with safe banking laws.
